Y. W. C. A. to Act on Resignation of Miss Doane

The third weekly supper for older girls will be served at the Y. W. C. A. Tuesday night, by a committee from the Council of Girls' Agencies. These suppers have thus far proved quite popular and will be continued as long as the girls desire. Plans for securing a new work assigned to Miss Doane until her successor arrives, will be discussed. Talk of two new theaters here has created more interest and discussion concerning the four Janesville, now has, and the policies of such an other theatrical matters are being widely talked of.

It will be an all-star cast which will present "Lightnin'" here at the Myers theater, March 20. Thomas Jefferson, noted actor, son of the famous Joseph Jefferson who created the role of "Rip Van Winkle" has the leading part. That of Bill Jones, made famous by the late Frank Bacon, while others in the cast are Bessie Bacon, daughter of the late play-wright-author; Charles Evans, made famous in "The Parlor Match," Grace Henderson, who has played with Maude Adams in "Peter Pan," Robert Keith, who has starred with Helen Monken; Felix Hance, creator of one of the rube roles in William Brady's "Way Down East," Walter Durant, who played in Bacon's company; Ed St. Leon, who played the ingenue part with Bacon in Chicago; and Grace Holman, who played the sister of Billie Burke. Every one of these has been promised this city. Demand for seats is already good, although sale will not start for some time.

To those who lament the lengthy periods that Janesville people wait to see moving pictures, the following will be interesting:
Out of the eight moving pictures

now playing at loop theaters in Chicago, three have been seen here. Two of them, "Dr. Jack," and "The Pill-grim," with their famous comedians, Harold Lloyd and Charlie Chaplin, had been seen here and had left before they had their Chicago premieres.

A Scene from "QUINCY ADAMS SAWYER" AT THE MYERS.

Of the 25 pictures showing at almost 50 theaters in other parts of Chicago, 21 have been seen here, and others are booked for the coming two and three weeks.

AT THE MYERS.
An all-star cast is often heard of, but seldom seen. But in "Quincy Adams Sawyer" the theater-going public will see what a real all-star cast is, and what one can accomplish. In addition to the long list of stars, there is an excellent story with excitement and comedy, and settings are said to be good.

The story of Quincy Adams Sawyer, the young man who came to Algonquin Corners from Boston to try one of his first cases and to adjust a legal matter is familiar to the many who have read the book of the same name written by Charles Felton Pidgin. It was at one time one of the most popular books on the market and its quaint charm of New England has been kept in the picture by the accurate reproductions of the old homesteads, villages, and gowns of a dying past. Blanche Sweet makes her return to the screen in this picture. She was at one time one of the screen's best-liked actresses, quitting the profession at the height of her career, and will be welcomed back. Lon Chaney plays the part of the small-town ear doctor, and fans know him by the many names which could be mentioned. John Bowers makes a handsome lead, and the picture is a real production of the quality of the production.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY A DOUBLE PRESENTATION KATHERINE MAC DONALD With BRYANT WASHBURN in "THE WOMAN CONQUERS"

Katherine MacDonald has appeared in a number of pictures in the past not corresponding to the title she has acquired as being "The American Beauty." "The Woman Conquers" is one of the best pictures she has ever made. Reports from different theatre managers are that this is an exceptionally good picture.

A romance of cold Fifth Avenue loyalties—and warm Arctic comradeship. In addition to the above picture we take great pleasure to introduce to you

LLOYD HAMILTON
In His First Two-Reel Comedy, entitled
"THE SPEEDER"

You will remember Lloyd Hamilton in shorter reels which he appeared in which gave you satisfaction even though the subjects were very short to exhibit his ability as a first class comedian. We dare to classify "The Speeder" as being just as big a comedy as we have ever presented in the past for laughs and thrills.

This is a variety program which we are sure you will enjoy.

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY LOUIS B. MAYER Presents

"THE SONG OF LIFE"
With GRACE DARMOND and GASTON GLASS
A Refined Melodramatic Presentation That Will Appeal to Everyone.

A Drama of Dishes and Discontent!
Every woman knows both; and the parts they play in human lives have been moulded into a masterpiece by JOHN M. STAHL. He gave us "The Woman in the House" and "The Child Thou Gavest Me"—but here he has embraced every mother's son and daughter of us.

Dishwashing, cooking three meals a day, house-clearing and taking care of a baby has taken all the sweetness out of many a romance as in this one.

tion. It is one of Metro's largest productions of the past year.

"Yuth to Youth" is another of the new Metro productions which the Myers theater will show. It is taken from a story written by Hubert Footner, famous author and teller of the Broadway star whose reputation is injured by unjust scandal, and who leaves Broadway, moves to a small town in the west. Here she meets with success and finds love, but her happiness is almost ruined when her lover discovers who she is.

Cullen Landis, Daniel Van Dusen, Noah Berry, Jack Pitts and others have parts. Vaudeville will be seen in connection.

AT THE APOLLO.
Katherine MacDonald, in "The Woman Conquers," breaks away from the stories she has had recently of society women, mistreated wives, and weaker parts which have found little favor, and plays in a little picture of the north. In the part of Nina Le Comp, the society debutante, she lives the life of the rich in large cities, and when she inherits large trappings and settlement interests in Alaska, she goes there. In the north she meets with many strange adventures and struggles which make up the main part of the picture. The climax is a fight between two men in a cabin for the girl, one of the participants being the pampered millionaire who really loved Nina, the other a strong French-Canadian.

"The Speeder" is Lloyd Hamilton's first starring vehicle, and it will be interesting to many fans for those who have been watching with interest and amusement this big, awkward comedian. It tells of various adventures with a "T. L. Lizzie," and will

A drama of dishes and discontent is said to explain "The Song of Life."

MILTON SILLS AT THE BEVERLY.

for the Apollo next Wednesday and Thursday. A John M. Stahl production, it will no doubt have the same appeal as have other Stahl pictures—"The Woman in the House" and "The Child Thou Gavest Me." While it is strong drama, it is said to have nothing objectionable in any way. In addition to Gaston Glass in the leading role, little four-year-old Richard Hendrick, Grace Darmond, Wedgewood Nowell and others are seen. The usual policy for the week-end, familiar to patrons of this theater, will be followed.

AT THE BEVERLY.
Thomas H. Ince has combined an excellent and absorbing story with an equally excellent cast of players in his latest production, "Skin Deep," and heightened the general effect by adding several new varieties of thrills.

For those who prefer personalities to plots, an all-star cast is presented which includes Milton Sills, Florence Vidor, Marcia Manon, Frank Campeau and others.

The story-lovers will find in "Skin Deep" an entirely new dramatic idea. "Skin Deep" is a notorious criminal, is faithfully depicted in an accident which befalls him immediately following his escape from prison. A skilled plastic surgeon, unaware of Doyle's identity, reconstructs his face. Around Doyle's struggle to live up to

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

Conflicting Price Movements Mark Week in Stocks

New York — Conflicting price movements characterized this week's stock market in which the new peak prices since the spring of 1920. The reaction, which was stated on rumors that another increase in the local reserve real-estate rate was impending, was construed as a correction of the weak technical position which had developed as a result of the record sustained rise.

The bidding up of special stocks was founded in part on the rising price tendency in various basic commodities; reports of impending mergers including Standard Oil of Indiana with Coudon Oil, and Kennecott with Utah coppers, higher dividend announcements, including the increase from $5 to $7 annually in St. Paul.

Trading in railroad shares was sluggish with price changes mixed despite the fact that the latest car loadings report revealed that more cars were handled the week ending February 24 than in any other car loading week on record, that the daily average of February loadings was the highest since last October and that in January the class 1 roads of the country earned 5.7 percent designated by the Interstate Commerce Commission as a fair return on the tentative property valuation.

Fig Iron production generally regarded as barometric on the course of trade, was higher last month than in any other February on record, being 82 percent over that of February 1922. The weekly steel and iron trade reviews reported mills operating at ninety percent of capacity, with the average price of steel products at $2.15 above the high established in September of last year. The marking up of the independent steel shares was partly in reflection of those reports.

Motor and motor accessory shares were heavily bought on reports that February production and sales were unprecedented in the industry, situations in the latter group being particularly violent. Copper shares were inclined to weaken, the price of the red metal being stabilized around 17 cents a pound. Cotton also established new peak prices. Foreign exchanges moved irregularly within comparatively narrow limits.

COTTON DEMAND ACTIVE AND PRICES GO ABOVE 30 CENTS
Memphis, Tenn.—Demand for cotton continues to be very active. Sales throughout the South are unusually large for this time of year, despite the fact that the principal centers. There is nothing to indicate that spinners are buying with any great enthusiasm or freedom, but heavy orders are coming into this and other centers and cotton is changing hands with remarkable rapidity. Sales in the eight leading Southern markets for the week are $2,000 bales, against 29,000 and 24,000 last year and the year before. Prices continue to rise. The highly profitable business being done by spinners in this country, combined with the large exports to Europe, has swung both spots and futures up to new high levels for the season. It may be noted, however, that the quantity of short cotton already sold to new mills in this country, and abroad is greater than is available. This doubtless is responsible for the unusual effort which middlemen are making to cover their requirements just as quickly as possible. Prices are quiet in keeping with volume of business. Advances in the eight centers range from 33 points at Augusta to 88 points at St. Louis and 30 points at Memphis, 50 points higher on the week basis 33 cents for middling uplands. All other points in the foregoing report have crossed the 30-cent level, varying from 20.15 at Augusta, to 30.50 at Houston and Galveston.

Nurse's Accident

Case Is Heard by Commission

Taking testimony in three cases, Friday afternoon, the county commission completed its two-day session in the city hall here and the examiner, H. A. Nelson, and reporter, returned to Madison at night. Interesting among the cases heard Friday was that of Miss Ella M. Trachsel, nurse, vs. Dr. Wayne A. Munn. Miss Trachsel was seriously injured when she fell through the window of the Beverly theater during the Harvest festival Sept. 22-23, while watching one of the parades. Dr. Munn's testimony was that Miss Trachsel was actually in his employ at the time of the accident, although she had left her work of sterilizing instruments for a few minutes to view the parade.

The matter is one of adjustment between the commission, the insurance company in which Dr. Munn holds a policy, and Miss Trachsel. The only questions offered by the insurance company were, as to whether or not the nurse was actually on duty at the time of the accident.

In the case of Mary Moser vs. Wisconsin Telephone company it was shown that the plaintiff suffered injuries to her right arm when she jerked it back suddenly after receiving a shock from the switchboard. She has suffered pain in the arm for six weeks, it was testified.

There was no appearance on the part of the plaintiff in the case of Earl R. Smith vs. Wisconsin Telephone company. The defendant offered testimony to show that Smith had told that he had a hernia and was going to try to hang it on the telephone company to get compensation. Decisions in all cases will be made later.

MATHESON REPLIES TO COUNCIL PLEA

In a letter to City Clerk E. J. Stoll, Assemblyman Alexander E. Matheson acknowledges receipt of the council's resolution asking him to vote against the Dahl bill. The resolution was passed at the meeting of March 5.

Mr. Matheson says: "Thank you for the copy of the resolution of the common council of Janesville. I am pleased to hear that I have already voted against the Dahl taxation measure. The Severson bill has not yet reached our assembly calendar."

820 at 8:20 P. M.—Firemen were called to the home of William Joyce, 826 Hyatt street, at 8:25 p. m., Thursday, to extinguish a chimney fire. The door around the stack was scorching slightly but no loss was claimed.

Valuable Addition to Library

What the general reader of the Bible most wants to know is covered by many pages of help—these might be called an appendix—which are within the covers—bound, by the way, of the new Big Print Red Letter edition of the Bible now being distributed to readers of this paper. This volume and appendix are as essential in a library as an encyclopedia. The appendix, however, where the number of books do not warrant the term library, such a Bible is even more necessary. The smaller the collection, the more the appendix is to have it complete the best and most concise of reference works.

This is the best edition that has ever been offered to the public for much more than the present nominal cost and the three coupons. The red letter feature of Christ's words alone make a special desirability. Then there are the comprehensive annotations and the fullness which add to the value. Even with other Bibles in the home, this particular edition should be there also for its convenience and for the excellence of its additional information which the regular text. The coupon offer is explained in another part of this issue. —Advertisement.

"RELIGION THAT COUNTS" DESCRIBED BY BAPTIST PASTOR

(The sixth of the series of Lenten sermons contributed by Janesville pastors.)

THE RELIGION THAT COUNTS.

BY R. G. PIERSON
Pastor, First Baptist Church.

Dr. Grenfell, the great missionary to Labrador, has truly said, "No one can write his real religious life with pen or pencil. It is only written in actions and its seal is our character, not our orthodoxy."

We are apt to measure our religion in terms of belief rather than in terms of action. Religion is primarily a matter of life and not so much a question of statement or observance of days and forms. Many folks conceive religion to be a posture of one or all of a large number of outward things. Outward forms may be religious but they cannot be religion. There is danger of "acting religion" and of "putting on" a life, leaving only a valuable symbol.

The religion that counts is the religion that finds expression in every day life and not simply through the observance of certain forms. The religion that counts has to do with all life every day of the year and through all the years.

Some one has defined religion as the life of God in the soul of man. The prophet, describes it in these words, "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly with the Lord." Paul said, "Fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, gentleness, trust, and without children of school age (4-20), is not shown in this report.

The emphasis in all these religions is that religion to be worth while must be practical. It has to do with life in all its phases and will find expression in everyday experiences as well as in times of communion and worship. Such religion takes many forms—honesty, purity, courage, faithfulness, and loyalty. It is a vital part of life. It is for Monday as well as Sunday. It has to do with the life of the body as well as with the life of the soul. It is not something that can be kept in a tight compartment to be used on special occasions. Religion is life itself. Someone has said that religion is not simply a creed, but an experience, not simply a restraint but an inspiration, not simply an insurance for the next world but a program for the present world. The religion that counts is the kind that inspires a man to give his best to others without counting the cost.

Buffalo's First Cousin

Makes His Appearance

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Fort Worth, Tex.—The first cousin of the buffalo has appeared on the Texas range. He'll be known to the livestock world as Vernier, and he's a second cross of the cattle and the buffalo—something once considered impossible.

The first Vernier seen at the Fort Worth stockyards and the packing houses came from the ranch of J. B. Slaughter in Garza county. The buffalo bulls came from the famous Goodnight buffalo herd in the Panhandle, and the cattle from the Slaughter ranches. The first cross were the catties, which are more or less common in certain cattle raising districts.

The second cross have been termed "Vernier." This is a new name in the history of breeding.

CUTICURA HEALS ITCHY RINGWORM

Eruptions Formed. Pained Badly. Could Not Sleep.

"My trouble began with a ringworm on my limb. As time went on the matter grew worse and itched badly. When I scratched some eruptions formed, with at times so badly that I could not sleep. My stocking used to irritate the breaking out."

"I tried many remedies but none of them helped me. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and finding that it helped me, I bought more and in less than two weeks I was healed." (Signed) Miss Mary Geisman, 416 Garfield St., Chelsea, Mich., July 17, 1922.

SCHOOLS REFLECT GROWTH OF CITY

Enrollment Continues to Increase, Standing at 4,276 March 1.

Monthly reports of the attendance department of the public schools are especially interesting to the public at large because the department is like a barometer on the city population. With interest in the growth of Janesville as widespread as it is, the following report of Miss Rosemary Enright for the month of February, is interesting:

During the month, 12 families, with 23 children entered the city, as compared with seven families, 10 children withdrawn, and two deaths, and also compared with the entrance of 23 children the month before, and 19 the month before that, December. So that the increase in the school census enrollment from Feb. 1, to March 1, is 17, or the same as the January increase, and 5 greater than the December increase.

Enrollment Now 4,276.

Thus the enrollment now stands at 4,276. Occupations of entrants' parents were: Carpenter, laborer, motorman and superintendent of material, the majority of them coming under the second heading, and doubtless securing work at the Chevrolet plant. The families came from America, Europe, Poland, Poland, Schagen and country districts of Wisconsin, Michigan, Center, Mich., and Harvard, Ill. Of course the increase in population through younger children, unmarried or married, and without children of school age (4-20), is not shown in this report.

Trouble with keeping children in school was less in February than for many years past, the records show. While in December, 48 cases were reported for investigation, and in January it had decreased to 43.

for February the number was but six.

The decrease in the number of cases of non-attendance was even more remarkable, the figures for the three months being 45—40—4. Truancy was the same, three cases being discovered, while the figures for visits to home, formerly the largest part of Miss Enright's work, are 55 for December, 36 for January, and one for February. Visits to schools dropped from eight to one during the month just closed.

Illness Cuts Attendance.

While this part of the report is most favorable, the part showing the absence and ill cause shows a poorer condition than was existent during January. Wet and frequent changing weather was no doubt the cause of the illness, the number of days reported of which jumped from 1,577 in December to 2,027 in January, and from that to 3,103 in February. The general wave of sickness which swept the town during the month affected school children as the others, and caused the figures which at first seem so startling.

Number of days of absence reported for the month was 5,311, as compared with 2,601 of the previous month. Of these, the cause of 1,355 was unknown, as compared with 281 for January. Under the heading of illness the following are found, second figures being for the month previous:

Unclassified, 1,038; 1,162; eyes, 15; 4; ears, 17; 6; teeth, 20; 23; throat, 30; 13; colds, 922; 317; contagion, 967; 472; tonsillitis, 10; 0; tonsilectomy, 0; 0; headache, 16; 8; sore hands and feet, 17; 15.

Among the chief causes for absence, aside from illness, were illness and death in the family, help at home, care of babies, weather, missed bus, accidents, overstep, lack of clothing and shoes, which is increased from the preceding month, out of city, moving religious holiday, neglected trunks, and social. Some of these were increased during the month, others were decreased. Under "accidents" for instance, the number dropped from 40 to 6, while absence because of weather jumped from 1 to 502, help at home from 81 to 102, and illness and death in family from 70 to 140.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor Gazette:

Notice a bill has been introduced in the assembly by request of the United Shoe Workers' union, Milwaukee, creating a board or commission, to examine and pass on the qualifications of cobblers. I wish to voice my hearty approval of this measure through the Gazette.

Why should our soles be jeopardized in the hands of incompetent cobblers? And how about garbage collectors, why not have them included among those to be examined for their fitness? What is more important than the proper collection and disposal of garbage? The health of our citizens should not be endangered by noisiness. It would seem to me this is just as necessary as to have the barber who trims your hair examined by a board.

Wisconsin is the original progressive state. Let us point the way in these modern progressive ideas. Why not have boards to pass upon the qualifications of "the baker, the baker, and the candlestick maker"; in fact, see that every citizen of the state is qualified for his or her chosen work. Let every mother's son and daughter pass the acid test of efficiency. Let us have in this good old Badger commonwealth, none but experts in their respective callings. Let Wisconsin be the only of all the other states in the union.

Some old fogies will say this would cost too much. Bosh! We can not have good things for nothing. Is it not worth the cost? Automobiles are expensive, but people will have them. Who wants to return to the cheap, slipshod methods of twenty years ago just because it costs a few millions more to run our state? Money is no object if we get results.

To be sure it will be necessary to provide quarters for these various commissions, if we adopt the system of having people in every line of endeavor examined and licensed, but the city limits of Madison can be extended without much trouble, and until room is available many of the boards, no doubt, could be housed across the lake at Mendota.

THE COBBLER'S FRIEND.

ERNST, CIGAR MAKER, DIES IN SAN DIEGO

Word has been received here of the death Feb. 14 in San Diego, Cal., of William Ernst, 73, a former cigar manufacturer of this city. Mr. Ernst's stop on the old bridge will be remembered by many. He left the city about 15 years ago, after living here many years, went to Rockford and from there to California. He originated the "Bass Drummer" cigar which had a wide sale while Mr. Ernst lived here and made them. His wife survives. He was a charter member of the G. U. G. society here.

Man's Conquest of Time.

The progress of mankind, from the earliest recorded ages, has been marked, by a ceaseless struggle against the limitations of time and space.

Civilization is mutual interchange of thought and the product of thought. This interchange demands transportation, hence the development of civilization has paralleled the improvements in transportation.

A useful lifetime should not be measured in hours lived, but in deeds done. Doubling man's productive capacity offers the same net result as doubling his period of usefulness or doubling the number of producers.

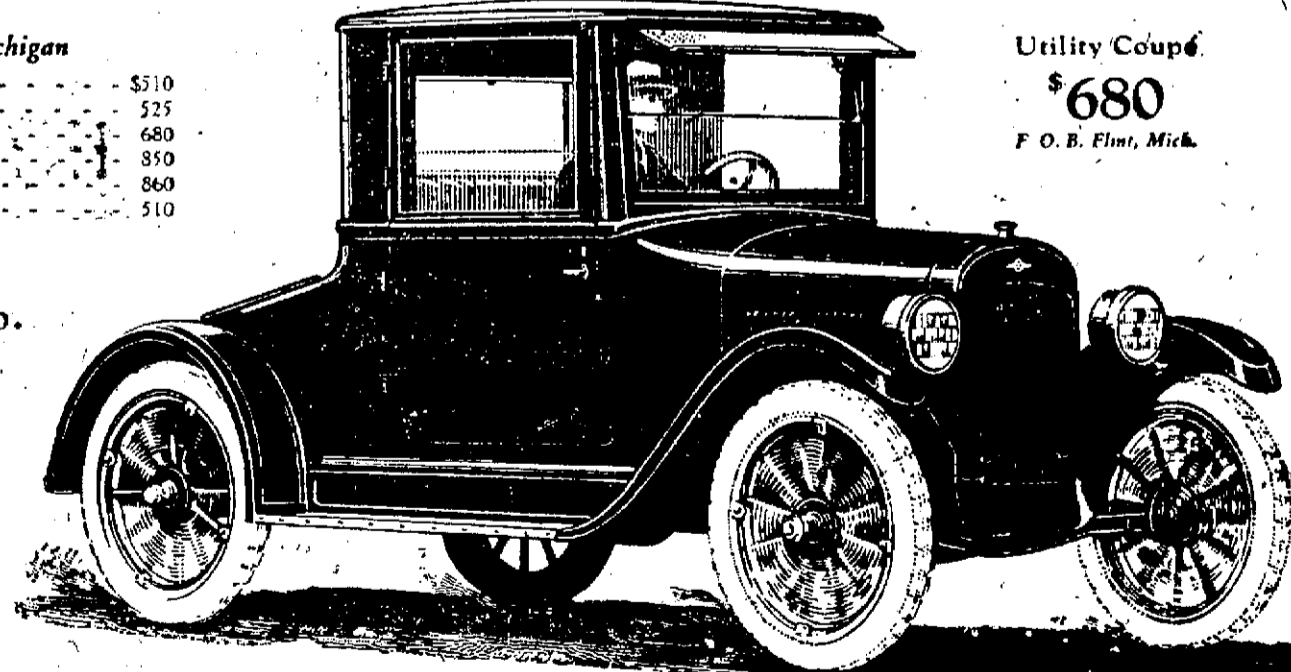

More than any other single factor of civilization, the automobile has multiplied the producing power of man, by decimating time and distance, and by providing a broad and flexible means for the transportation of men and their products.

The amazing growth of the automobile industry could not have been, had not the automobile more than justified itself as an economizer of manpower, a stimulator of production and a creator of wealth.

CHAPTER I

El Monte Del Macete. Sheridan checked his corral as Jackson first held up his hand in sign of caution and then changed the gesture, pointing at something beyond the hill. The cowboy slid lithely from his saddle and the owner of the Circle S followed suit, anchoring the sorrel mare with reins he let trail from bit to ground, joining his foreman, who had drawn back his pistol mount from the top of the rise.

"What is it, Red?" asked Sheridan, instinctively lowering his voice.

"Smoke, down the draw a ways. Taint grubbin'! Someone's hearin' a rumin' from."

Sheridan followed the direction of Jackson's finger, finding it hard to differentiate the faint plume of blue smoke from the mid-afternoon haze that shimmered over the foot hills. He located it and his lips tightened, his eyebrows lowered to a straight line above his eyes in which danced a sudden sparkle of excitement and resolution. His right hand dropped automatically to his gun holster and eased the weapon in its smooth leather sheath. Jackson had already shifted his own gun farther back on his lean flank. The two nodded at each other with grim satisfaction.

"Holister," said Sheridan quietly. "To hell with that red and white heifer. We'll get him with the goods."

"Hell likely he's a Greaser along with him. We better split. Leave the heifer. I'll take the other side the draw."

They were in the lower hills, halfway between the mesa and timber line on the mountains. Where they stood, close to the crest of a rolling ridge, it was joined to the next by a sage-tufted buttress of rocky soil. To the right and left the ground sloped sharply off from this junction. Jackson had pointed to the left, where the land ran down toward a little spring, favored by the strays they were seeking on the open range.

The cowpuncher dropped to all-fours, then flat wriggling on his stomach across the connecting spur under cover of the scanty brush. Sheridan gave him a minute or two, and followed the same working down the draw towards the smoke, and the spring.

A brisk rattle sounded, a burr-r-r of alarm, electric in its sudden elegance. Sheridan halted, his hand going swiftly back to the grip of his gun and staying there while his whole body stiffened and his eyes swept the low edges for the owner of that warning.

Not ten feet away a diamond-back rattlesnake lay, its body inflated and flung into a graceful lightning coil, the jetty eyes glittering, the blunt head poised for a lightning strike, the tongue waving slowly in and out of the opened mouth where the poison fangs were already lifting their hollow, curving needles for the deadly injection; to take toll for this invasion of the reptile's sunning ground. The greenish-yellow body, stamped with a connected chain of brown, diamond-shaped blotches, outlined in white, the vivid black and white bars of the tail, the uplifted rattle, were indelibly photographed upon Sheridan's memory. For a few heart-beats man and snake faced each other, both alert, the one determined, the other defiant. Sheridan could have blown off that proudly balanced head with his undulating tongue and bony eyes, but a shot would have defeated his purpose with Holister. The snake's neck twisted into the shape of an S, the buttons of the rattle rasped incessantly; it seemed to quiver with rage, measuring red fawn gratefully.

A shadow drifted over the ledge, covered the snake, dimmed for a second the glitter of its glance. Instantly it uncoiled, away from Sheridan, and glided, swiftly, but with dignity, to a crevice where it disappeared. Sheridan exhaled a breath of relief and glanced up at the soaring rock fawn gratefully.

"I owe you a fat chicken for that," he said, under his breath, and as the graceful bird wheeled on quickly crossed the remainder of the rocky flat and plunged again into the mesquite.

Beside the little pool of the foothill spring a man stood over a red and white calf that lay with its feet tied in a bunch. Its tongue lolled out, its side rose and fell like a blacksmith's bellows, the piteous whitened eyes rolling fearfully. The man was tall and swarthy, broad of shoulder, inclined to thickness at the waist and he was wearing a blue denim shirt above overalls and well-scuffed leather chaps. His broad sombrero was pushed well back, showing sleek black hair that matched his clipped mustache, his eyebrows, his eyes. He held the string of a tobacco sack in his teeth and he was dextrously rolling a cigar with one hand when Sheridan emerged from the mesquite. Paper and tobacco grains fluttered to the ground, the man's fingers clutched towards the butt of his gun but the motion halted above the brush. The two thumbs hooked inside the belt of his own chaps.

"Whose calf are you going to brand, Holister?" he asked. The eyes of Holister had something in common with those of the rattlesnake. In proportion they were set more closely. His mustache twitched in his sneer.

"So long's aint your's, I don't see as its any of your business," he answered, with a side glance towards the smoke a little way back of him, where the heads of two cayuses showed above the brush. The two nodded at each other with grim satisfaction.

"It's mine," said Sheridan quietly. "Take off the rope."

"Talk's cheap. This is a maverick."

"My calf, Holister. I can prove it."

"How? Where's its mother?"

"You may know that better than I do. I know the calf is mine by the markings. I marked it a few days after it was dropped. That red shoulder patch, shaped like a boot with a spur, is distinctive enough. I saw the calf earlier today. I've been trailing it with other strays."

"Holister grinned.

"Tubble is with you, tenderfoot, you're a stray yourself an' don't know it. You don't belong on this range. Know his markings, do you? Well, I know the calf's mine by the patch on the underside that's shaped like a half chewed hotcake. His voice changed to banter. "You speak back into the mesquite. Pete Sheridan, like the mangy coyote you are. You know the rules of the range. This is a maverick an' I found it. It's mine an' I'm going to set my iron on it."

"Take off that rope."

"You go plumb to hell! You don't know best how close you are to it this minute."

"If I go there I'll be to find you waiting, Holister." Sheridan stood motionless, in easy pose, but his voice was crisp with purpose. His gray eyes shone like the glint of steel on the mica flakes imbedded in green granite. Holister had crouched slightly from his hips, arms away from his body, out curving, his face set in a snarl. He was instinct with the desire to shoot, to kill, but something in Sheridan's seemingly careless confidence held him, baffled him. "You've seen me shoot, Holister. Better take off that rope."

Holister's eyes shifted. His hands closed and opened jerkily.

"Hands up! High! Grab for the sky, Greaser. My gun's now starin' up at starin'!"

Two arms, clad in cotton of gaudy check, shot up from the brush to Sheridan's right. Then the head and upper body of a Mexican came into view, mushroomed beneath his sombrero. A pistol gleamed in one hand. With them rose half the lean length of Jackson, hatless, his red hair fuzzy in the sun. He reached for the gun in the Mexican's nerveless grasp and with it covered the discomfited Holister, while his own pistol menaced the man he had looked through the greenish, unheard and unseen while the other had been intent upon surprising Sheridan.

"Two aces in the draw, Holister," drawled Jackson. "An' don't forget I'm double-handed. What they call ambersiderous. There's yore heifer, what's yore hurry?" he jeered as Holister swore, first at him and then at the Mexican, whose walnut colored face was dirty grey with fright.

"You can take your rope with you, if you like," suggested Sheridan, "and ride down draw, please. All right, Red, give him his gun."

Jackson slid his own gun back to the holster, broke the vaspion of the Mexican and tossed into the brush the cartridges hung from the cylinder into his palm. Then he threw the weapon at its owner's feet.

"Git, you Greaser. Vamos!" The man followed Holister through the brush to the horses. They mounted, wheeled and galloped off down the draw, Holister turning in his saddle to shake his fist and sputter out an out. "If you'll get back to the heifer," said Jackson, "I'll put our brand on the calf an' let it go. And I'll find my Steison. A bush hoofed it while I was trailin' that Greaser. He had his dirty finger crooked to pull when I called him."

"Thanks, Red." The two were close enough, the Mexican in between employer and employee, to make further expression of gratitude superfluous, though Jackson had been less than six months with the Circle S. Sheridan rejoined the horses and stood looking out across the mesa while his sorrel mare, Goldie, nuzzled and gently poked at him in protestation at this unshaded, unwavering halt. Below him the plain unrolled to the south where it bent with the horizon. To east and west faint violet outlines of sawtooth ranges showed above the wide level, cañon and grasswood, soapweed and gramma grass and mesquite fought it out for existence and the right of reproduction. Ghost Creek meandered through the midst of it, a series of blue, sky-reflecting pools, strung on a silver thread, redeeming the mesa from a complete surrender to the desert. There were times when the creek was a raging torrent, cutting viciously through the soft, powdery oil, and there were times, when it was most needed, that Ghost Creek proved its name and became a phantom stream, a wealth that mocked the parched cattle, drifting helplessly down to the alkali-rimmed bogholes where their scattered skeletons would lie, and the buzzards and coyotes had feasted on their shriveled carcasses.

Arid and hot lay Chien Mesa, desolate and inhospitable. Yet, ten miles distant, where the low buildings of bright green carpet, Sheridan had sunk for water and found it in the subterranean reservoirs of treacherous Ghost Creek. His gasoline supplied him with enough for limited irrigation and he prospered quickly, his imagination as to what he had done with the floury soil that only needed water to produce five crops of alfalfa a year, the fattening for heavy steers and calves of death.

He saw a puff of white smoke off to the east. He fancied he heard the foot of a wildcat from the railroad spur that ran from the main line, on the other side of the range that mounted behind him, to Metcalf, the county seat and shipping point for the community. It was sparsely settled as yet, but the surge was set for Capital to come in, to cut the mesa up into flourishing little farms, divided off by ditches, blossoming like the rose.

Jackson came up behind him, fanning himself with his recovered Steison. In his other hand he carried two running-irons, not yet cool.

"Holister left his iron behind in his hurry," he said. "The Lazy II. A damn good brand for him. He hurried the offending cool down the slope. You'd have had a hard time to prove this to that old cow head of a markin's, Sheridan, even with me for witness. It was sure a maverick. It had lost its ma. D'you know why?"

Nothing Helped until She Began Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"When my baby was born," says Mrs. Postluszny, 106 High Street, Bay City, Michigan, "I got up too soon. I made me so sick that I was tired of living and the weakness run me down something awful. I could not get up out of bed mornings on account of the count of my baby. I thought it would break in two, and if I started to do any work I would have to lie down. I did not believe that any woman ever suffered worse than I did. I spent lots of money, but nothing helped me until I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I felt a whole lot better after the first bottle, and I am still taking it for I am sure it is what has put me on my feet."

There was a time when electricity was used for lighting purposes only.

Electricity is being used in the homes for many other uses such as washing machines, irons, toasters, vacuum cleaners, grills, percolators and many other appliances and devices.

These appliances and devices are used by nearly all tenants, who have at one time or another lived in an electrified house.

That is the reason why tenants prefer to rent houses that are wired. That is the reason why tenants are more contented and happy in the electrified home. The caustic remarks of Mrs. Neva Thompson Kelliher are believed to have brought death to her husband, Stephen Kelliher, business agent of the theatrical janitors' union, in Kearney's Soft water not only makes food more appetizing, but it greatly reduces the cost of cooking. Vegetables boil more tender and all the way through and their flavor is greatly enhanced. They cook in much less fuel or flame.

Soft water in laundering saves in time, trouble and money. Clothing comes out cleaner and whiter than ever before. Less soap is used. The laundering requires less time. In many, many ways, soft water reduces household economy.

FROM EVERY FAUCET—

The home that installs the Wayne System has an abundant supply of 100 per cent soft water from every faucet suitable for every household use and excellent for drinking.

Not soft water as you use it from a cistern, with its roof dirt and impurities, but absolutely soft water better for every household use and excellent for drinking.

The Wayne System is reasonable in price. It is easily and simply connected with the city water mains. It softens water automatically and never wears out. All the hardness is taken out. Every home is entitled to soft water. Thousands have it. So can you.

Lueder, regular Republican, and a large vote for Judge William Dever, Democrat, in the recent primaries, Chicago is looking forward to one of the hottest municipal campaigns in years. It's a case of take your choice, lay your odds and may the best man win.

Ambassador Hanihara, right, in formal dress, leaving White House with Col. C. C. Sherrill, President Harding's military aide.

Salary figures, that the "common border" would probably regard as box car numbers, seem to be quite the rule with the Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey, according to the senate sub-committee, probing the activities of American Oil companies. Salaries of $50,000 to $125,000 are common according to the probers.

The Big Bambino on the golf links at Hot Springs, Ark.

Babe Ruth apparently is making good his promise to be down to weight and fit as a fiddle for the 1923 campaign. This photo from Hot Springs, Ark., where Babe is taking preliminary workouts, shows he has lost some of his girth at least.

Map shows German territory seized by the French to force reparations payment. White space represents occupied territory.

Miss Julia Hartnett.

A moment after she had told of a plot that led up to the murder of "Handsome Joe" Lorus, wealthy automobile dealer, a story the state claims will send her suitor and two other men to the gallows, Julia Hartnett, 25, nearly collapsed in Judge John R. Caverly's courtroom in Chicago.

Maj. J. W. Downer.

The ship which brought back Maj. Gen. Harry T. Allen, commander of the U. S. forces of occupation in Germany, also brought back Maj. J. W. Downer. This officer, one of the last of the officers to return from Europe, commanded the first U. S. army unit to enter France. He sailed July 27, 1917, as commander of the Sixth field artillery, first division A. E. F., Battery A. He has received virtually every war medal of the allied nations.

Rep. Charles E. Winter.

Charles E. Winter succeeded Frank W. Mondell as representative at large from Wyoming, on March 4.

Gen. Payot.

General Payot, brain of the French transportation system during the war, now is in London to attempt to persuade British to give French control of the Cologne rail system. The French claim this is necessary for the success of the Ruhr action.

Evelyn Nesbit and her son, Russell Thaw, at Atlantic City.

Evelyn Nesbit, according to her latest photos from Atlantic City, seems to be enjoying prosperity after a period of more or less financial depression. She and her son, Russell Thaw, are vacationing at Atlantic City.

This golf suit is entirely new in texture as well as color. The material is called "Inver" and is made by a silk company. It resembles a silk tweed. It is apple green in color, the coolest shade for summer wear.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding, photographed as she and president started recent vacation.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding, accompanying the president on his vacation trip in Florida, has apparently completely recovered from her serious illness of several months ago which for a time caused grave concern all over the nation. That her long siege of illness didn't lessen her pleasant smile is indicated by the above photo, taken at the start of the vacation jaunt, and one of the first taken of her since her illness.

Ernest Judet.

Ernest Judet, well-known French editor, has returned from Switzerland to demand a fresh trial in his country of having sold the influence of his paper, "Le Clair," to Germany during the war. He was tried and condemned to life imprisonment while he was in Switzerland. He is seventy-one. It is said he may have French political secrets that now may help him gain his freedom.

Choice liquors valued at several millions of dollars are stacked high on the wharves at Nassau, Bahamas, awaiting shipment to arid lands (including the U. S.). The jolly photographer may have taken down the names of some of the consignees, but he forgot to mention them.

Chicago.—With commission house too, on the recent in value of the country's stock of wheat. Selling on

Is It The Valves Or The Rings?

Locating The Leaks That Prevent Compression Retention

WHEN THE GAS ESCAPES from a cylinder, as it is hand-cranked through its compression stroke, leakage must be taking place at the valves or between the piston-rings and the cylinder walls; assuming that the spark-plug sound and tightly seated in the cylinder and the priming-cock, if any, free from leaks around its threads or at its valve. It is absolutely certain that both valves are ground to perfect seats, that their springs are acting properly, that their stems are perfectly free in their guides and that there is sufficient clearance between piston rings and the cylinder walls. The "blowback" through a leaky inlet valve can sometimes be heard by listening at the carburetor air-intake, while the cylinder is cranked through compression, the rubber hose above mentioned being used as a sound conveyor. If the carburetor is removed and a candle flame held at the intake port of the block, it will flicker outward during the compression stroke. Leakage at an exhaust valve can hardly be positively determined without removing the exhaust manifold, which is not a difficult proceeding in most cases. With the manifold removed and the ports exposed, listening or the use of the candle flame will show whether gas escapes during the compression period. If piston rings and the inlet valve are demonstrated to be tight, the obvious conclusion is that the exhaust valve is at fault. Leaks around spark-plugs and priming-cocks and around the valve-caps of engines without detachable heads are best detected by the formation of bubbles in oil which has been flowed over their joints.

WIRING DEFECTS AND FIRE HAZARD

W. H. H. asks: Do you consider it possible for a car to be set on fire by any defect which could develop in its wiring? The reason why I ask, is that a neighbor's car and garage were recently entirely destroyed and some people have laid the fire to this cause.

Answer: If insulation falls and a live wire comes into contact with a grounded part of a car, the very heavy current which flows through the short-circuit, thus created may so heat the wire as to set its insulation on fire or the spark at the point of contact may ignite gasoline vapor. In the case that you cite, it may have been that the ignition switch was left on and that the resistance unit finally burned out (as has sometimes happened) a spark being then produced, which ignited gasoline vapor from the carburetor, which may have been leaking. However, the likelihood of a car taking fire from electrical defects, when no one is about, is very slight, the effect of moisture on the insulation being the only factor that would be likely to cause a short-circuit.

TROUBLE WITH BREAKER POINTS

E. G. H. writes: I am having trouble with the rapid burning and wearing away of the breaker points of my distributor. The engine runs perfectly, so long as the points are right, but it is only about three days before they get so black and ragged that it begins to miss. What do you advise?

Answer: These points may be of inferior material and this is quite probable unless they are genuine ones, approved by the manufacturers of your ignition system. Too high voltage caused, for instance, by a poor connection between the generator and battery; improper condenser action and excess current in the primary circuit, caused by short-circuiting of the resistance unit are all conditions that may be causing this trouble. The presence of oil within the distributor also tends to damage the points. You better have your ignition current measured for more sure that it is not of too great amperage.

Why You Should Buy Racine Tires and Tubes Now

You get just what you want when you buy Racine Tires and Tubes.

APPEARANCE

The deep black tread and cream side walls of the Racine Tire make a pleasing contrast. In LOOKS the Racine Tire is real "class."

CONSTRUCTION

The most advanced methods of building tires and the best materials obtainable are used in making Racine Tires. One inspector to every seven workers is your assurance that the best methods and the best materials are properly combined in the Racine Tire.

SERVICE

The heavy, flat, extra-thick tread, the efficient non-skid tread design, reinforced side walls and bead construction to prevent rim-cutting, no skimming of materials; all these insure long wear and satisfactory service, the greatest number of miles at the least cost per mile.

ECONOMY

Almost without exception, tires of all makes have advanced in price within the past few months; many have had two price advances. Racine Tires have had but one price advance to date but further advances are sure to come quickly. Crude rubber now costs three times as much as it did six months ago. Cotton fabric and other materials used in tires have all increased in cost. The price of the finished tire must increase as the price of the raw materials increases. It is real ECONOMY to buy Racine Tires now before the price increases. We honestly advise you to
